

My Last Letter

Date: Too Soon

To _____, _____, _____, and _____,

You are reading this letter now because I am no longer here. I certainly wish I had stayed longer but perhaps it is God's way of making room for others. I have led a wonderful life and experienced plenty of ups and downs, all of which have formed the person I became.

I know that you know that I love all of you and want the absolute best for you. I leave with no regrets except that I will miss you greatly. Maybe I'll be with you in some form going forward, who knows?

Please fill the void that I leave with love for each other.

I have tried my best to organize my assets and distribute them to all of you as I deem most appropriate. There has been no reflection of any favoritism in my distribution plan. My hope is that you will do with what you receive in a manner reflective of your love for me and apply these newly acquired resources to best satisfy your own long term goals.

My Personal Vault, of which this letter is a part, is intended to simplify the settling up of my affairs and the transfer of assets to all of you. I won't be available to answer questions but please call upon my financial advisor, _____ and my attorney, _____, for assistance and questions in the process of settling my estate. Putting this information together for you has been both a difficult yet rewarding task as it will certainly ease the transition to being without me in your life. Take the process in small steps; you will get through it over time.

I will miss all of you very much, but knowing the depth of character each of you possess has given me a world of comfort.

My love to you,
