

Solicitor Disclosure – Investment Program

As a referred client through a financial institution investment program, we are providing you with important information regarding your financial advisor’s “dual-hatted” role as a representative of both Raymond James Financial Services Advisors, Inc. (“Adviser”) and of your Financial Institution, which is not affiliated with Raymond James. In addition to acting on behalf of Adviser, your individual financial advisor is also a registered representative of Adviser’s affiliate, Raymond James Financial Services, Inc. (“Broker” and with Adviser and other Raymond James affiliates, “Raymond James”).

RAYMOND JAMES NETWORKING AGREEMENT WITH YOUR FINANCIAL INSTITUTION

The term Financial Institution refers to your national banking association, federal savings association, or credit union. Your Financial Institution and Raymond James have entered into a written networking agreement pursuant to which your Financial Institution refers potential clients to Raymond James through Broker in exchange for a referral fee and/or commissions (described below). You should assume Adviser will share ongoing fees with your Financial Institution for so long as you have an advisory account at Raymond James. Your investment advisory fees are neither reduced nor increased as a result of the compensation paid to your Financial Institution. Typically, your Financial Institution may share in an amount that is at least 75% and up to 100% of your investment advisory fees paid to Adviser after Raymond James deducts certain administrative expenses payable by your Financial Institution. Investment advisory fees represent the fees received by Adviser from you pursuant to any written investment advisory agreement(s), including the Master Advisory Agreement. This networking agreement with your Financial Institution also includes two of Adviser’s affiliates, Broker and Raymond James Insurance Group, Inc.; you should assume that any brokerage or insurance commissions related to your account will similarly be shared with your Financial Institution at similar percentages to your advisory fees paid by Adviser to Financial Institution.

As part of the networking arrangement, your Financial Institution and your financial advisor have separately agreed to a compensation formula for the financial advisor’s provision of services as a Raymond James representative; Raymond James does not typically provide direct compensation to your financial advisor for these services. Your financial advisor’s compensation may or may not relate directly to the amount of fees and commissions paid by Raymond James to your Financial Institution.

Raymond James may provide your Financial Institution with other compensation that is routinely provided to Raymond James’ financial advisors not subject to networking agreements, such as forgivable loans, and other non-cash compensation. Based on compliance with applicable law and its internal policies, your Financial Institution is required to put limitations on the amount of fees and commissions that can be shared with its personnel who are not also representatives of Raymond James.

INVESTMENT SERVICES ARE PROVIDED BY ADVISER, NOT YOUR FINANCIAL INSTITUTION

By using Adviser’s advisory services, you acknowledge your understanding that any investment advice provided by Adviser, an investment adviser registered with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), is solely provided by Adviser and not by your Financial Institution. Adviser is not affiliated with your Financial Institution, and except when provided directly by Adviser, only your financial advisor is authorized to provide investment advice or recommendations on behalf of Adviser or to act for or bind Adviser. No investment advisory agreement with Adviser will become effective until accepted by Raymond James.
